More Announcements.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the announcement of Mr. Jas. W. Swayne, as a candidate for re-election to the office of city attorney.

Mr. Swayne comes before the people, asking an endorsement of his official career in an office he has held but one term. He has always taken a stand upon questions which concerned the city or his office. His official utterances have been plain, vigorous and straightforward. He has been a positive officer, always fighting for what he believed to be the best interest of the city, and he has never hesitated to oppose any measure which he thought would be injurious to the city or its credit. He will enter the canvass with flattering prospects of success, and if elected will live up to the record he has made for himself in the past.

Mr. Stuart Harrison also announces as a candidate for re-election to the office of city secretary, and so far has no announced opposition in the race. Mr. Harrison comes before the people with a flattering record, in which there is not a visible flaw. His office has been handled in a manner creditable to him, and its present arrangement could scarcely be improved on. The clerical business of the city could not be given into better hands, and it is a compliment to Mr. Harrison's integrity and ability that no candidate has as yet announced himself as an opponent in the coming election.

Judge Beckham yesterday fined the sheriff of Wood county $50 for not serving papers on attached witnesses. He also fined Wm. Rushing $100 for non-attendance as a witness in the district court.

The stockholders of the First National bank held their annual meeting on Tuesday, and after transacting other business the names of E. B. Harrold and E. F. Ikard were added to the board of directors.

Mr. W. J. Jordan, late of Weatherford, has purchased an interest in the dry-goods firm of B. C. Evans Co. and will make Fort Worth his home in the future. The B. C. Evans Co. is among the solid institutions of the state, and its continued prosperity means much for the city.

The audience at the opera-house last night failed to catch one of Mr. Bangs' best pieces of acting, which seemed to amuse the star. The scene was where he first gains admission to Combs' quarters in the Black Wharf, and for a moment, writhing at Combs' feet, he addresses the audience in a voice whose deep, low bass filled every crevice in the house. It was one of his best lines, but the audience remained as still as death, and Mr. Bangs, after waiting a moment for the expected applause, looked up at Combs, and in audible, natural tones said, with a humorous smile on his face: "That fetched them, didn't it?"

The Silver King.

The performance of the Silver King at the opera-house last night was witnessed by a small audience, which was enthusiastic in its applause.

It is not our intention to enter into a minute criticism of the play, for it was seen here last year, though with out its present greatest attraction, Mr. F. C. Bangs, who played the leading part last night. The character of Wilfred Denver, as presented by Mr. Bangs, is one of the noblest ever seen on any stage. It is a picture of life that requires no exertion to comprehend and which irresistibly appeals to the sympathy of the auditor. So natural is his delineation of the man who is haunted by a great crime but who feels a great love for his wife and children, who are dead to him, that he creates a spontaneous sympathy in the breast of every one who sees him, and they feel as though a real silver king is before them, and that the character on the stage is the hero of a real drama; that he is not speaking lines prepared for him by others, but that he is Wilfred Denver in flesh and blood.

Mr. Bangs is a great actor and as an individual attraction ought to fill the theaters in Texas from top to bottom. He has many elements of greatness in his profession—a superb stage presence and physique, a voice whose equal is possessed by but few great stars on the stage, over which he has perfect command, and an ability to portray accurately any emotion that thrills the heart of a human being. Wilfred Denver is one of the most emotional male parts ever placed on the stage, and it is exceedingly doubtful if there is another living actor that can present it so effectively as Mr. F. C. Bangs.

The support was good. Miss Charlotte Behrens has a thorough and correct appreciation of the character of Nellie Denver, but her voice was somewhat monotonous. She was called before the curtain with little Lillie Farren, who impersonated Cleopatra—Wilfred Denver's daughter—at the end of the fourth act. Mr. Bangs was twice called before the curtain, and the applause was fairly earned. Mr. Samuel Verny as Jaikes, the servant, was a favorite with the audience and sustained the part with credit.

The piece is well mounted, and several of the scenes were marvels in the art of stage dressing. Another performance will be given to-night, and the house should be packed to overflowing, for the play and the players deserve it.

Mite Meeting.

The ladies of the Fourth Street Methodist church will hold a mite meeting for the Ladies' Aid society at the residence of Maj. Jesse Jones to-night.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

VanZandt-Ryan.
Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Ryan request the pleasure of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Virginia.

Kheiber M. VanZandt, Jr., at St. Andrew's Church, Wednesday evening, January 14, 1915, at 8 o'clock.
Rev. W. D. Sartwell officiating. Reception at residence.

The above card of invitation, which was sent to the friends and acquaintances of the bride and groom some time last week, caused an intense interest in polite social circles, and last night the Episcopal church was the scene of a brilliant gathering, despite the extremely bad weather.

Shortly before 8 o'clock the invited guests began to arrive and were conducted to seats by Messrs. Charlie Fox and Wallace Peak, who acted as ushers, attired in faultless evening costume. The decorations in the church were elaborate and tastefully placed. In the center of the chancel, suspended from beneath the chandelier, was a huge ball, composed of orange blossoms, mistletoe and other flowers, while in front of the chancel was an arch of cedar interwoven with flowers. Japonica, smilax and mistletoe were scattered in a profusion of artistic decoration about the church. The Fort Worth Rifles were out in uniform to see their comrade bid farewell to his bachelorhood, and the faces of many brilliant social lights were seen in the congregation.

A few moments past 8 o'clock a slight commotion at the entrance attracted every eye, and the bride entered leaning on the arm of her father, Mr. A. P. Ryan. She looked remarkably lovely as she walked down the aisle, arranged in an exquisite sea-shell pink wedding dress and long gossamer bridal veil. She was met at the step which leads to the chancel by the groom, whose arm she took, and soon they were standing under the huge ball of orange blossoms listening to the impressive words of the Rev. Mr. Sartwell which made them man and wife. As soon as the ceremony was over the bride and groom slowly walked down the aisle and took a carriage for the residence of the bride's parents, which is about three miles west of the city. A large number of friends followed them in vehicles to attend the reception and shower congratulations on the happy couple.

The bride and groom are universally known in polite society in Fort Worth, in which they are recognized leaders and favorites, and their marriage is probably the most brilliant that has ever occurred in the city. Mrs. K. M. VanZandt, Jr., is a daughter of Mr. A. P. Ryan and his first wife. She is eighteen years old, and came to Fort Worth from Paris something over a year ago, and has been a social queen ever since her arrival. The groom is 23 years old and a son of K. M. VanZandt, president of the Fort Worth National bank, and one of the most popular young men that has ever graced the society of the city.

THE GAZETTE wishes the young couple the full measure of happiness, and honored places in society when prosperity has poured its cornucopia upon them in years to come.

A Severe Fight.

A very severe fight occurred in a saloon near the lower end of Houston street, in which several parties were roughly handled. The participants were Max Reichman, R. Bruno, Gus Smith and Frank Bell. Just what the difficulty originated about is not known, but Smith and Bell were friends in the alley and opposed to the other two. Bruno had his left arm broken by a chair in the hands of Bell. Reichman's finger was bitten off; Smith was minus an ear when brought to police headquarters, and all were very badly used up. Bell seems to have gotten away without being hurt, and was the only one concerned who escaped arrest. The prisoners were all bailed for their appearance in court.

Commissioners' Court.

Ordered, that a committee of three, consisting of the county judge and Commissioners Leary and Terrell, be appointed to investigate and report upon the application of the F. W. & D. C. Ry. company for additional right of way through the Tarrant county school lands and for purchase of town site thereon.

Ordered by the court, that the county judge be requested to examine records and see if the county has forfeited its right to the old jail by reason of its removal of prisoners, and if so can the county remove the improvements from the same, and that he make a report to this court at the next term.

Francis Character was granted a certificate of character as a preliminary step to obtain license to practice law. Adjourned for the term.
